In 1904 by a resolution of the House of assembly it was ordered that the annual reports should cover the financial year ending June 30; this necessitated a report for the first six months of 1904, but before it was time to make the annual report for the financial year Parliament decided to revert to the former practice of reporting on the calendar year. Therefore a report was issued covering the two calendar years 1904 and 1905.
